

BOCCASETTE BEACH

The beach is a real sandy sandbank connected via a bridge, a place which is still un-spoilt except for a few wooden beach huts providing services to tourists. A place far away from the hustle and bustle, the noises of the city, from the most popular tourist destinations, reachable through kilometres of countryside, expanses of cultivated land reclaimed from the sea thanks to great works of reclamation.

Here one can live the beach life, in a place which is slightly wild and so very quiet, fascinating, conveying strong sensations to the visitor. One may also take a walk along the road that, coasting along the valley, reaches the mouth of the Po of Maistra. In that semi-deserted place, with a little luck one may admire the slow flight of the great red heron or majestic buzzard. Here also, as in Barricata, there are bathing establishments with tourist facilities, integrated into the environment and respectful of the natural landscape.

BARRICATA BEACH

The beach of Barricata is more than 3 km long, a true island between a branch of the Po and the sea, reachable by way of a charming moveable pedestrian bridge which crosses the Po di Tolle. It is most loved by those who seek tranquillity, to be in touch with the rich and unspoilt natural environment, without having to give up the chance of efficient facilities on the more well-known beaches which are however, integrated into the environment and respectful of the natural landscape. Several tourist structures are available, some of which offer bird watching facilities or boat excursions into the Veneto Regional Park of the Po Delta, motor home facilities, maisonettes, apartments, restaurants. One should not however, expect a super equipped beach establishment, because Barricata is characteristic for being an integral part of the Park of the Po Delta.

The beach is of soft sand, the sea is very beautiful with sandy beds which descend gradually, ideal for swimming and paddling; to add to one's trip, a panoramic tour of the Scardovari Basin, next to the port, one of the most enchanting spots of the Po Delta.
